

Centering Disability in Healthcare

Wednesday, November 2, 12:00 – 1:30pm EST

The healthcare context is not necessarily a welcoming space for persons with disability. How can health practitioners and researchers confront ableist bias, barriers to access, and the complex circumstances that determine health? How can they ensure that the persons with disability they serve are active participants in health care decisions?

This event is Part One of the four-part virtual speaker series Advocates Assembly: Disability Research from the Ground Up. Each event will ask disability justice activists and disability-centered service providers how to frame the future of disability and rehabilitation research.
